

Figure 1. Certified routing concentrates high precision on the decision boundary, while a separately scoped scalable implementation establishes external-system impact. Panels use different implementation scopes and do not constitute a shared-binary claim.

Figure 2. TensorJoin executes precision escalation as a dynamic exact query plan. Host-visible counts set the FP32 and FP64 launch extents; direct accepts bypass later precision stages and join canonical reconstruction. Counts are from G5 P1.